The Tuscaloosa Medical Reserve Corps (TMRC) is a multi-agency, multi-purpose team of VOLUNTEERS. The TMRC is organized following national examples and training is offered to meet national guidelines. In the event of a disaster, members of TMRC may be integrated into the overall response plan. It is understood that all members may not be able to respond due to their responsibilities to employers and families. However, having the organization in place, registered with the national organization, and proper identification issued to the members greatly enhances the speed at which available volunteers can respond to the current needs of the community and nation.

TMRC needs trained medical personnel and support staff from all skills and professions. There is no advertising or recruitment budget. TMRC must rely on the members to spread the word to recruit the volunteers who will answer the call to help others in times of need.
